THE SEVEN AGES OF KEMMEL HILL

A. W. Hadley.

Altar of Mars-Bloodshed and scars-Death to the sons of men, kill, kill, kill! Here's where the world has bled; Grave of a million dead; List to the tale, then, of old Kemmel Hill

> Two apes in a primal forest Listened and gibbered low, Then sprang with a hundred others To claw at a common foe; Like demons enraged and shricking-Gone mad with the lust to kill, They tore with their fangs and throttled Each other on Kemmel Hill.

Attacked in their tribal cavern, Assailed by a foreign clan, The men of the Stone Age wrestled And fought while a world began; With bludgeons of flint and sandstone And arrows propelled with skill, They fostered the art of warfare And battled for Kemmel Hill.

The reek of a Druid altar Dripped red with the sacred wine, While the blood of a princess mingled With that of the fatted kine. Then clamored the voice of vengeance-Fanatic and wild and shrill, Till they hurled from its crest of murder The Druids of Kemmel Hill.

At bay on its beetled summit, A chief of the Gauls defied Proud Rome and her gilded legions And menaced a Caesar's pride; "Strike! Strike for your wives and freedom, Fight on till a grave you fill!" They shattered the boasted phalanx-And rotted on Kemmel Hill,

In armor of gold, and pennons A-dance with the glint of steel. A knight and his bold Crusaders Pressed on with a Christian zeal, Till Right and the world-old banner Prevailed and the castle's rill Ran red with the blood of demons-The robbers of Kemmel Hill.

The breath of a thousand cannon, The hate of a hundred years, Spelled doom as it spurred to daring Napoleon's Grenadiers; The scroll of their valor ended Save all but a line to fill, The finger of Fame graved deeply Their glory at Kemmel Hill.

The burst of the bombs and rockets, The roar of the guns and shell, Lent spurs to the charging poilus, And daunted the Huns of Hell; "For France, and the graves of Flanders!" Great God! Was it wrong to kill? Through a shambles of death they battled For freedom, and Kemmel Hill.

Altar of Mars-Bloodshed and scars-Death to the sons of men, kill, kill, kill! Here's where the world has bled; Grave of a million dead : This is the tale, then, of old Kemmel Hill, Dollars hidden in the vaults or hoarded in "stockings" are disloyal, selfish dollars should call for the interment of their owners. Keep money circulating, but avoid extravagance.

Economize in foodstuffs, coal, metals, clothing—because extravagance in these things interferes with the war needs of the Government, but don't neglect health, don't stint on necessities, and above all, don't pay a cent for reputation, prestige or graft. Although some of my valued help have already joined the colors, and more ready to go; although dental materials cost much more than ever before, and general expense of conducting a large office continually increased, I have no word of complaint. ONE MAN OPERATES BOTH TRACTOR AND IMPLEMENT with the New

It Solves The Farm Help Problem

The perfected 4-cylinder overheadvalve engine of the new Moline-Universal Tractor, Model D, develops 18-horsepower on the belt, pulling a 24-inch grain separator or 16-inch ensilage cutter, with a belt speed of be-tween 2400 and 3000 feet a minute.

Variations in load do not affect the engine speed of the Moline-Universal in the slightest, due to an electrical governor that instantly regulates the throttle to compensate for the slightest change in pull. Electricity, the most sensitive, quickest acting force known to man, holds the engine of the Moline-Universal under control, and makes it run steadily under all

The pulley on the Moline-Universal Tractor is located directly in front of the engine, making it easy to change from one operation to another. Running a silo filler, corn shredder, feed grinder, wood saw, clover huller, hay press, water pump or electric lighting plant are only a few of the many uses to which the Moline-Universal can be put.

Unusual economy is shown by the Moline-Universal Tractor, because of the perfected overhead-valve construction of the engine, with a small bore and long stroke, and valves that measure half the diameter of the combustion chamber. A specially de-signed intake manifold heats and dries the gas to a perfect condition for burning. These features in combination extract every ounce of energy from the gasoline, producing power at remarkably low cost.

The construction of the Moline-Universal engine is such that it will stand up without faltering under the hardest test to which it can be subjected. Extra large bearings, lubrication under 35 pounds pressure, alloy steels and careful machining give it the stamina to stand up for long runs under full load.

The real superiority of the Moline-Universal Tractor, however, lies in field work. Here it enables one man to perform every field operation, including planting, harvestng and cultivating. Its universal adaptability practically does away with horses and also solves the farm help problem.

It is easily the most useful and greatest labor saving device ever invented for the farm. Investigate what this machine can do for you.
